

Matthew Rhode, Adam Levin, Scott Borg guitars

Founded in 2015 by Scott Borg, Adam Levin, and Matthew Rhode, Kithara Project lies at the intersection of performance and arts advocacy. Described by Eliot Fisk as “charismatic, entertaining, and spontaneous young masters,” the trio has ravished audiences with its ambitious arrangements and whimsical, interactive, and daring performances. As soloists, Borg, Levin, and Rhode have distinguished careers of their own, marked by regular festival and concert appearances across the US, Europe, Australia, and Latin America and a growing solo discography on the Naxos, Odradek, and Tresona labels.

Anthony Hunt poet

As an undergraduate struggling to pay attention in an economics class, Anthony Hunt began writing poems and has never stopped. A retired university professor with a well-received scholarly book on Gary Snyder's Mountains and Rivers Without End, he taught courses in literature and writing in Nigeria, Maine, Puerto Rico, Poland, Croatia, and Taiwan. His poetry has appeared in numerous reviews and anthologies. Tony teaches classes on poetry for The Institute for Lifelong Learning and has read poems at Chatter Sunday since its inception.
