Chasity Salvador Spoken Word

Chasity Salvador is proudly from the Pueblo of Acoma. As a recent graduate of Stanford University where she studied Comparative Studies in Race and Ethnicity, she spends her energy advocating, writing, and creating spaces for indigenous women. As the Executive Assistant at the renowned organization, Tewa Women United, she focuses her academic, professional, and personal careers on learning about and practicing healing of indigenous women, women of color, those most vulnerable, the Mother Earth, and families. In her free time, she enjoys spending time with family, hiking in her ancestral homelands, and learning about agriculture.
