Ben Bormann Poet

A Burque-born and -raised, Wisconsin-aged poet and maintenance man, Ben Bormann spends his days practicing the Tao of tool use, making sure idylls remain relevant, and quietly rebelling against the destructive and swelling tide of global civilization. He has shared his poetry regularly throughout the Albuquerque area for close to a decade at open mics and slams, and has been featured at various gallery openings, poetry readings, and mixed media events.

MUSIC WORTH TALKING ABOUT

Today's performance is sponsored by Kirsten Anderson in memory of Dr Vernal Josephson (5/15/13–3/11/97), a physicist on the Manhattan Project in Los Alamos, who played trumpet and French horn, and passed on his love of music to his children, for which we are very grateful.

Did you miss it?

On Sunday, June 16 we were treated to David Lang's "Child" for which Nick Tauro created video accompaniment and mixed it live in performance . . . all captured by Riha Rothberg and Cindy J Young using 3 cameras. A million hours of editing later, it's now available for you to see in high definition on YouTube.
