MUSIC WORTH TALKING ABOUT

Trio No 1 in B Major Opus 8 (1889)
Johannes Brahms (1833–1897)

I Allegro con brio

Norbert Krapf poet

Norbert Krapf, emeritus professor of English at Long Island University, moved back to his native Indiana from the New York area in 2004 and since then has published seven books, including Songs in Sepia and Black and White (2012) and American Dreams: Reveries and Revisitations (2013), and a jazz and poetry CD with pianist Monika Herzig, Imagine. As Indiana Poet Laureate 2008–10, Norbert had a mission of reuniting poetry and song, and his collaboration with bluesman Gordon Bonham, who has also become his guitar teacher, began as part of their work together in the Hoosier Dylan show. With his recent Creative Renewal Fellowship from the Arts Council of Indianapolis to combine poetry and the blues, he took two trips to the Mississippi Blues Trail and another trip to Memphis. Norbert points out that the work of Delta bluesman Robert Johnson and Long Island poet Walt Whitman inspired him to start writing poetry in 1971. In 2014, Greystone Publishing will release his collection Catholic Boy Blues, 135 poems about being the survivor of childhood sexual abuse by a priest. More info about him is available at www.krapfpoetry.com.

We CELEBRATE today's performance in honor of Rachel Gallegos and Evan Davenport, young musicians who have grown up with Chatter as volunteers and performers. Each is going off to extraordinary adventures. Rachel to study with highly selective violin teachers in Chicago; Evan to intern with an esteemed maker of fine string instruments in Boston. Rachel and Evan — we will miss you and we will follow your lives in all their turns — because you have made us love you.

The Chatter audience is invited to join us after the performance today for refreshments with Rachel and Evan.
