Jason Witter Spoken Word

Jason L. Witter loves writing and drawing silly and scary things! Jason grew up in the small town of Crownpoint, New Mexico. His parents always encouraged creative endeavors, so Jason and his brothers were constantly writing stories, drawing pictures, creating comic books, and making silly movies. This desire to create and entertain led to an MFA in Theatre from the University of New Mexico. Over the past decade, Jason has written, produced and directed numerous plays, but he has found particular enjoyment in creating shows for young audiences. His play Cap'n Hook (which is a comical retelling of Peter Pan from the villain's point of view) was published by Playscripts, NY and has been produced at over 30 schools in the US, UK and Canada. Influenced by the writings of Shel Silverstein and the Scary Stories to Tell in the Dark series, Jason enjoys writing about scary things in a whimsical way. He finds it very rewarding to take a familiar monster and find some humor in it, or turn a classic horror archetype on its head, or explore questions like "what DO witches do before the witching hour?" His first illustrated book of poetry The Things That Live in Your House was ranked # 2 in the "Best Self-Published Picture Books for Geeky Kids" by GeeksRaisingGeeks.com in 2014. The Tiniest Vampire (and other silly things) is Jason's second illustrated book of children's poetry. He lives in Albuquerque, NM.
