chatter music worth talking about SUNDAY

The Smoking Jackets are four multi-instrumentalists with a serious love of music and comedy. They combine eclectic, engaged music with humor and heart to create an environment where everyone can let loose and be themselves. From private parties to ukulele festivals, they love to perform, teach and lead a crowd in joyful noise. What kind of music do they play? “WHATEVER WE WANT! From Latin to jazz, rock to folk—we love to play the songs that make you smile, move, sing along and laugh. Sometimes all mashed together! We all love to play and teach the ukulele, but be warned: there may be tuba, glockenspiel, horns, accordion, marimba, drums, squeaky toys, saws...”

Program to be announced from the stage

Adam Crittenden Spoken Word

Adam Crittenden’s writing has appeared in Barrelhouse, Bayou Magazine, Tupelo Quarterly, Barn Owl Review, Whiskey Island, Quarterly West, and other journals. Blood Eagle is his first full-length book of poetry and is available from Gold Wake Press. He’s also into costume making, but that is another story.

Today’s concert is dedicated to celebrating the re-opening of Tinkertown Museum for their 40th season, in honor of creativity and imagination!
