Marcia Butler Spoken Word

Marcia Butler has had several creative careers: professional musician, documentary filmmaker, and author. During her thirty-year musical career, she performed as a principal oboist and soloist on the most renowned of New York and international stages. The New York Times hailed her as a “first rate artist”. The Creative Imperative, her documentary film exploring the essence of creativity, was premiered in 2019 at The New York Society Library. As an author, Marcia’s nationally acclaimed memoir, The Skin Above My Knee, was one of the Washington Post’s “Top ten noteworthy moments in classical music.” Her debut novel, Pickle’s Progress, was hailed by NPR as “surprising and audacious.” And her third book, Oslo, Maine, whose protagonist is a moose, was reviewed as “a seductive, imaginative, and utterly unique story.” After four decades in New York City, Marcia now calls New Mexico home.
